It's tough to be strong: Advances in bioinspired structural ceramic-based materials. 18

Michael M. Porter and Joanna McKittrick

Adapting biological processes to synthesize ceramic materials yields microstructures remarkably similar to natural materials with mechanical properties at least as good.

Student perspectives. 25

Photocatalysis for clean water—Putting sunshine to work for health and safety

By 2015, the United Nations would like to ensure that at least half of the nearly 800 million people who live without clean water and decent sanitation are within one km of potable water at an affordable price.
